

MOOD SCREEN

design by Kevin He & Alex Chai

Kevin was born in a watery region, Hangzhou. He grew up and listened to the legendary story of the White Lady for many times. When he was visiting the Broken Bridge of West Lake, he heard the melody of the familiar theme song and recalled the scene in which Xu Xian lent an umbrella to the white lady in the rain. He couldn't help to be amazed at this touching story. In such an intoxicating situation, the creativity of the paper umbrella screen came to his mind.

The screen is made of PET material. It is heat-insulated, flame-retardant, tasteless and harmless, and 100% recyclable. Besides, aesthetic considerations and the wavy sector design also increase the intensity and sound-absorbing area of the sector. The arc surface can absorb sound waves from different directions to achieve a better sound-absorbing effect. The paper umbrella screen is divided into wall hanging and stand. It can be applied to living rooms, reception areas, lobbies, restaurants and other areas. Simple installation--only a few screw holes can help to present a beautiful combination effect.
